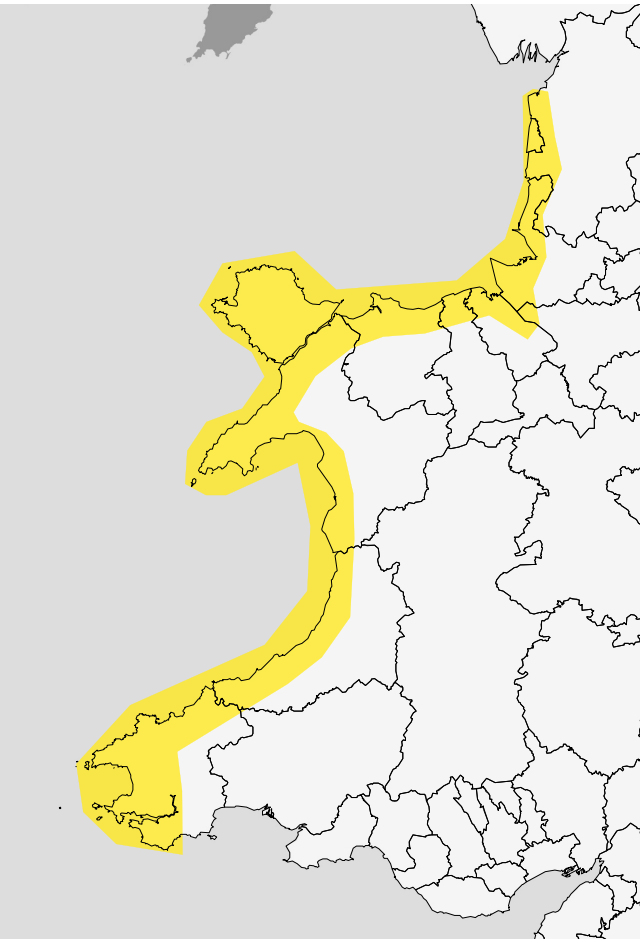
Yellow warning
Wind

Between
01:00 Tue 9 Apr 2024 and
15:00 Tue 9 Apr 2024



Strong winds may bring hazardous coastal conditions and could cause some travel disruption.

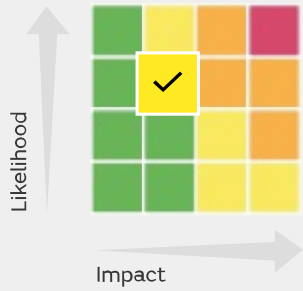
What to expect

- It's likely that some coastal routes, sea fronts and coastal communities will be affected by spray and/or large waves
- Some short term loss of power and other services is possible
- Some delays to road, rail, air and ferry transport are likely

Further details

A spell of strong winds blowing from the northwest will affect this region on Tuesday. Initially arriving across Southwest Wales, in the early hours of Tuesday, and reaching North Wales and Northwest England during Tuesday morning. Gusts will reach 40-50 mph widely, with 60 or 65 mph gusts expected for exposed coasts of Southwest and West Wales overnight. Winds will likely ease (although still remaining breezy) across Southwest and West Wales before dawn on Tuesday.

What should I do?



✓ Medium likelihood of low impacts

If you are on the coast, stay safe during stormy weather by being aware of large waves. Even from the shore large breaking waves can sweep you off your feet and out to sea. Take care if walking near cliffs; know your route and keep dogs on a lead. In an emergency, call 999 and ask for the Coastguard.

Be prepared for weather warnings to change quickly: when a weather warning is issued, the Met Office recommends staying up to date with the weather forecast in your area.

Give yourself the best chance of avoiding delays by checking road conditions if driving, or bus and train timetables, amending your travel plans if necessary.

People cope better with power cuts when they have prepared for them in advance. It's easy to do; consider gathering torches and batteries, a mobile phone power pack and other essential items.

Reason for update

The warning start time has been adjusted to start one hour later.
